

GEOCACHING

There is a relatively new activity out there in the woods these days. And not only in the woods. It is also happening in cities and towns, rural areas and urban areas. There used to be (it may still be there) a cache in downtown Fairbanks, not 100 yards from our store. It is called geocaching, and it is a modern days sort-of treasure hunt. It started in 2000, and has just exploded from that time. For more information on geocaching, go to <http://www.geocaching.com> and explore their website. This site is quite interesting and has more detail than I can go into here.

“Geocachers” secrete caches in various locations. A cache can be the size of a matchbox, it can be a plastic container or it may be an ammo can. In any case, it should be weather-tight. I was told that they cannot be physically buried. If there is a pile of rocks, it is permissible to move some rocks, place the cache in the pile, and re-pile the rocks. They can be placed in a tree, or inside a man made object (for instance, a trash can). The location of the cache is then publicized, usually on the internet in GPS format.

The object of the “game” is to find the cache, and leaving it in place so others may also find it. So, armed with their trusty GPS units, the geocachers take to the hills, fields and streams (and vacant lots, parks and parking lots) and go to the coordinates for the cache. The GPS will put you within a few feet or meters of the cache, and then the hunting begins.

Often inside the cache are inexpensive objects for the finder to take, and hopefully to replace with something else. That something else is sometimes a wooden nickel. See David Phillips article on page 76. The medals illustrated on this page are generally too expensive to leave in a cache on a frequent basis. These have been made to publicize geocaching and some of the groups that participate.

At the top of the page is the 2005 Geocoin. These are sold out. The 2006 Geocoin (left) is available at <http://www.geocachealaska.org/alaskageocoins.htm> in brass, silver and silver with gold relief. There is also a 1 inch “geopin” available.

EDITOR'S COMMENTS

In keeping with our front page theme, Dave Phillips was kind enough to provide information on Geocaching woods. Geocaching is gaining in popularity. We can only hope that we don't see as many geocaching coins as we are seeing of the military challenge coins!

MONEY TO BURN

Alaska GeoCaching Woods

There is a new category of Alaska woods appearing. These are the woods put out by Alaska Geocachers. These woods feature the geocacher's nicknames and are called signature woods.

These signature woods are left behind in caches found by the wood's owner, thus leaving their "signature" behind, indicating they have found that cache.

I am aware of four geocacher woods, as follows. Three are from Anchorage geocachers, and one from Eagle River.

ANCHORAGE: FLYRFN, www.geocaching.com.

ANCHORAGE: Mama Mouse and the Mice Kids. Both of these have a common reverse, directing geocachers to "Get you own personalized coins at GeoCoins.net"

ANCHORAGE: The Slat Rat, Wherever you go, be there.

EAGLE RIVER: lrb & mlb, Caching since 2/20/2005. Geocaching, Where you are the search engine, 2006. Multicolored, looks like it was done by hand.

No doubt there will be more as the geocaching hobby expands and matures.

ALASKA GOLD TOKENS NEW 5 DWT GOLD TOKEN

Two new varieties of the small Alaska gold tokens have recently come to light. These are shown greatly enlarged to show detail.

Alaska Round 1/4 Pinch, 1901 Indian #6.

Obv: Ugly right facing head as on #4, but 16 stars and head centered on the die.

Rev: 21 leaves left and right, similar to other dies but unique to this variety.

Alaska Round 1/4 DWT, 1909, Miner, #11. Note: This variety is very similar to the very common variety #2. However, both dies are different. The obverse is the same as the rare variety #10.

Rev: 1/4 (shield) DWT. inside a wreath. Leaf at left ends over serif on 1, leaf at right ends well above the right edge of 4, bow loops made up from 3 line segments each, no berries. 5 leaf pairs right and left. We away from bow, all leaves away from denticles, 1 break in each bow loop, 2 separated knots in bow. Die A1RQ17.

Our thanks to Mike Locke for providing this information. See his web pages on small gold tokens at: <http://www.calgoldcoin.com/default.htm> or just the Alaska at: <http://www.calgoldcoin.com/alaska.htm>

Shown actual size above, and enlarged below, we present our new, 5 DWT gold token. Rich Witrosky was kind enough to sell us some more Nome gold. We have enough gold for 7 or 8 of these, and then a few of the 1 DWT.

These will be priced at $250 postpaid. The price is subject to change if gold prices go up. If you would like one when they are ready, let us know. We will put you on a waiting list and advise when they are available. An email address would expedite correspondence. You are under no obligation to purchase should you change your mind.

1 DWT made from Nome gold are still available for $75. 1 DWT tokens from Fortymile gold are $65.
